FEE

Tuscia International Summer School on European and International Studies

The Tuscia International Summer School on European and International Studies has been conceived thanks to a project of the Centre d'Etudes Européennes et Internationales (<https://centrostudicsei.wordpress.com/>) and a partnership between the Tuscia University and the Côte-d'Azur University. It aims to analyse the international relationships, and in particular the relation between the USA and the European countries, through an interdisciplinary approach paying special attention to the presidential models and the Euro-Mediterranean area. All activities will be finalized at exploring the development of geopolitical areas, the change in the nation-state and the power groups running it, the democratic or undemocratic processes taking place in the various national scenarios, the preservation of human rights, and the political communication conveyed by both traditional and social media. The participants will be immersed in a vibrant and interacting atmosphere and will be alternatively involved in classes, workshops, supervised projects, and intellectual exchanges, generating an actual working group with a didactic focus within a perspective of innovative and transnational research.
